I..really didn't expect such a positive reaction to my confession..thank you guys so, so much.
It..made me think..what if I stayed here, as..me? I don't think I would be comfortable using me irl name, and I know it's normal to not do so anyways..but it's sort of a touchy subject for me. I am all right sharing my first name, but I'm not comfortable going by it.
Of course if you don't want me I'll turn around and leave for good, but if you're alright with me here, not telling any lies or making any glorifications, then I'll stay and do my best to be a reasonable and nice person here.

I haven't seen you before? Maybe because I joined in 2017. But come here, forget the past, and we'll welcome you! :)

It was shocking to read that someone I used to know and considered to be a best friend was only a fake. But I guess it's better knowing the truth than it is living a lie. Even if it was a lie, it's hard to move on from the past, especially when we had some good times. However, I think it would be getting to know you as your true self rather than a made up person, which I'm not trying to be negative in anyway.
